You deserve more than 30 points if you can give astronomers a convincing answer to "What is a planet?"
Anyway, for just 10 points per word:

1. The newly discovered object dubbed Xena (ZEE-nuh) may or may not qualify as a planet. If it doesn't, what traditional "planet," smaller than Xena, loses its planetary status?

ANSWER: PLUTO

2. At the other end of the planetary spectrum are objects 10 to 75 times as massive as Jupiter: too small to start the fusion of hydrogen, but big enough to fuse deuterium (doo-TEER-ee-um). What two words designate such a semi-planet, semi-star?
